United Party for National Development The United Party for National Development (, PUD) was a political party in Dominica. It was the second party formed in Dominica to contest the 1979 election. It was formed after members of the People's Labour Party defected. The party contested the 1979 election and won three seats, representing the islands of Dominica's Northern Division, while its leader, Lloyd Sanders, held his seat. The PUD contested the 1983 election, but lost all three seats. After the election, Lloyd Sanders formed the Dominica Liberation Movement.
